This action is responsive to the communication filed July 21, 2003.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-25 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over The Prior Art described in the specification in view of Cawley et al.

The specification describes valves made as claimed except the powder compacts are sintered prior to joining them. Cawley et al teach making a composite article by joining component green compacts and then sintering the whole to produce a final product. It would have been obvious for one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have made the Prior Art valve my such a method. Such combination would inherently provide an intermediate article of stacked green discs. The use of powdered tungsten carbide or the other compounds recited is considered to be an obvious step in that such materials are known in industry.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. The references cited show sintered composite articles.
